this is starting to look like you are usurping mark's project dan, the more you dig in and refuse to allow him complete control of his idea, the more it looks like you are trying to muscle in, it does from where i'm sitting.

Your talking about having someone have complete control 😞 I have always got the impression thats a thing you would fight against 😞 when it's opion based dan yes but this is a personal project we are talking about with only one aspect being inclusive - the voting. i'm not saying fpr go and lock himself away, we all vote and that be that but i think because he had such a clear vision then it is counter-productive to muddy the waters by having the decision making a joint process.

 i think if fpr retained his final say status and felt he was totally in control then he would actively go and source input from yourself, the forum and beyond, afterall that is what he has done this year. this whole business with kind of mixed ownership just makes the final say that bit too ambiguous.

you get the final say on the forum which is quite right but you must also take the flak sometimes that comes with being stuck in the middle. you have the mods to help you take the blame/credit etc, put mark in where you are in his wards structure and i'm sure he would require a similar back up support system but there has to be only one in ultimate charge.
 do you see what i mean? i know your enthusiam makes you want to help but you must also let go a bit and put your faith in him, it does mean though that by doing so you are excluded. this whole ownership thing sends out the wrong messages.

i know of a forum that shut down and had to re-register beacuse there was a problem whereby the administrator of the forum didn't own the domain name and it compromised his running of it. i don;t suspect for a minute that that will happen here but there is always the possibilty that it could.

Awards as part of the forum.

Talk about separate awards / awards transferring to other sites really misses the point. The awards were conjured up by Fins on this forum and should be allowed to grow into a separate entity that enables people on all forums to vote for the winners.

We should all feel proud for anything that has grown out of this forum. And we will all be part of it as it grows. Why can't we all push what is such a great idea and make it stronger rather than seek to copy and devalue it and in the process alienate so many members?

<edit> Just to clarify.. the Urban Arts Awards should still be one as organised by Fins to represent this forum and all other forums / individuals. We all need to get behind this brilliant idea and make it grow.

I would have thought that the best solution would be to let FPR take his idea (and name) and run an independent awards which will be supported by this forum and WK and galleries and artists and blogs etc all putting traffic to FPR's site, this'll mean a bigger event with more accurate results and possibly more sponsorship money or expertise.

I and Im sure most other members on here felt that the awards was part of the forums, it could not have taken place without this forum being behind it. If Fins feels that he wants to run it totally independent from here then thats fine, its his decision. For the sake of the other 5,700 odd people on here the UrbanArtAwards will continue as part of the forums.

I think you will find that originally FPR had no intention of creating the awards independently next year, as he wants them to be forum related as much as they originally were. But since he has had his own concept stolen from his grasp, then the idea of becoming independent to make the awards totally unbiased was forced on him.

look up the word usurp. if mark was in complete control he couldn't have been usurped and would have no need to look at alternative ventures, i feel his hand has been forced somewhat.

would you give mark the name, and let him do with it as he sees fit, the same way you'd like to be treated?

O.K. that's got to the bottom of it.

I can understand why he's upset, being told he can bugger off and do something else on his own with his own name and not much chance of success because it's going to be undermined by the awards going on here in competition.

As I've already said I would have thought that the best solution would be to let FPR take his idea (and name) and run an independent awards which will be supported by this forum and WK and galleries and artists and blogs etc all putting traffic to FPR's site, this'll mean a bigger event with more accurate results and possibly more sponsorship money or expertise.

That would allow the 5700 members here, plus all those that aren't members here to make a real event, not just this forums event, it'll be better for the whole scene.

so let me get this straight..next year there will a Banksy Forum Awards called the urban art awards and a separate awards run by FPR? .. surely one is stealing from the other and in that process devaluing it? I really don't get the need for 2 separate awards

Are you still avoiding answering why you denied co-registering the name? I wonder why.

And for your information, the name is the figurehead, hence why FPR wanted to feel like he was working equally towards the end product.

I think its incredibly poor form if you avoid answering this question, as far as I am concerned, it all boils down to that point and your machevalian reasoning behind not wanting to share.

Lets just make some things clear for a minute.

You cant own the rights to the idea of an art awards.
A person that came up with a name, and owns the domain for it has the right to use it.

but dan ignoring your sentiments can you not see that mark has been pushed out of something he worked his arse off on for four months and now, purely because you think you know better you're effectively saying 'i'll have that, thank you very much'?

i don't doubt you want to look after your forums, i just feel that this has been very underhand and you will not even give mark a fair crack to go free and run with his idea! if you want to survey the forum fine, but do it off your own back and stop hiding behind that poxy name. start afresh and if it is a success no one can accuse you of muscling in. the way it looks, you are profiteering from the success of an event mark created, cultivated and presented.

regardless of the time of year it leaves a horrible taste in the mouth, i thought a lot more of you than to stoop that low dan, i really did.

I know what would be the best for the awards, you don't want that to happen, and I can only think it has nothing to do with protecting members but everything to do with keeping control of it, which is a shame, as it was FPR's idea in the first place and a larger wider awards will benefit the whole scene and therefore this forum too.

As you know I started this forum and the 20 odd others for the good of the Members, Artists and Galleries 😊 If you feel I have not done a good job then maybe the forum is not the place for you 😊 I just run it the way I thinks best 🙄 I dont force people to join here! they must do it coz they like it. If I own the domain name UrbanArtAwards its coz it will be used for the good of the forums and its members, as it should be. I cant really see that you can question my the ideals of what I do when you take a look at my track record. Do you think I have flipped and are now trying to destroy all the good that has come from these forums? or is it more likely that Im protecting things for its members 🙄

but dan ignoring your sentiments can you not see that mark has been pushed out of something he worked his arse off on for four months and now, purely because you think you know better you're effectively saying "ill have that, thank you very much"?

i don't doubt you want to look after your forums, i just feel that this has been very underhand and you will not even give mark a fair crack to go free and run with his idea! if you want to survey the forum fine, but do it off your own back and stop hiding behind that poxy name.

start afresh and if it is a success no one can accuse you of muscling in. the way it looks, you are profiteering from the success of an event mark created, cultivated and presented.

oh come on! 🙄 your just being silly now 🙄 your just trying to push and push until you get your own way 😊 I was hoping that a few of you would have realized that those sort of tactics dont work on me. The forum has not got to this stage by me being pushed around to suit individuals personal needs and views.

Maybe this world is just as cynical as the real world? The only freedom is in the actual art.

Lets just make some things clear for a minute.

You cant own the rights to the idea of an art awards.
 A person that came up with a name, and owns the domain for it has the right to use it.

are you serious dan? you disgust me. a monkey could have done what you did, this is so out of kilter with the spirit of the movement. if anyone could have come up with it then why didn't they?

mark had the foresight, inspiration, desire and conviction to bring this idea to fruition, are you seriously saying that by coming up with a name and allowing your forum to host the voting then it is your's and all the hard work means nothing?

have just a little humainty for your fellow members, seriously.

Are you still avoiding answering why you denied co-registering the name? I wonder why.

And for your information, the name is the figurehead, hence why FPR wanted to feel like he was working equally towards the end product.

I think its incredibly poor form if you avoid answering this question, as far as I am concerned, it all boils down to that point and your machevalian reasoning behind not wanting to share.

Can you tell me the point of co registering the name? coz then I might be able to give you an answer

The point of co-registering the awards ceremony/name etc whatever you did, would be so that FPR would feel that all his hard work was being out towards something that he had some autonomy over. He's a very moralistic person, so clearly wants to make sure that if he is going to put a lot of hard work into something that it goes along the lines that he adheres to morally, or at least has a say in attempting that.

This forum was nothing more than a marketing tool for an idea that an individual person had. Did you think if the idea Silky? No. But you marketed that idea. I don't need to go into a counter arguement about intellectual property rights, but that is basically what FPR feels he has had taken from him and as I have clearly said for all to read, you registered the name without his consent - whilst supposedly working on what was now a 'joint effort' - and when you were asked to make the registration a joint legal registration between you both, you OUTRIGHT REFUSED.

Is that is incorrect, please correct me by all means.

I hope you may finally be able to give me an answer before I finish for the night. I have a career to go to after all.

I know what would be the best for the awards, you don't want that to happen, and I can only think it has nothing to do with protecting members but everything to do with keeping control of it, which is a shame, as it was FPR's idea in the first place and a larger wider awards will benefit the whole scene and therefore this forum too.

I do want it to happen! 🙄 Im not stopping anything! 🙄 Fins want to do the awards away from the forum, and I wish him well! what more do you want from me 🙄 about those votes, as a new member, I don't know many names on here and i don't read all the threads... So I thought the awards were organised by the forum. It's only when FinsburyParkRanger sent me an email asking me for photos in case I'd win something (a few days before the end of the votes) that I got to know his name. Then I told myself : the forum is big and some members help Silky to organize things as it's very time-demanding etc... It's only when this thread started that i understood that the idea of the awards was FPR's ! I suppose that a lot of the members were like me...
