time for bed methinks. thought we might get some resolution here but there seems to be some serious backtracking going on.

Ideally I would like all the forums involved in the whole democratic process with just one small independent web site solely responsible for the final vote, no advertising on it and then one huge party. Not cool to threaten people. 🤪

I get used to it 🤪 I really think a few people on here think they can upset me enough to push me into doing anything. How little they know about me 🤪 not a threat but " you may live to regret your actions" is harsh and bloody hell at the end of the day....

ITS AN AWARDS CEREMONY!

yes a hell of a lot of time, effort and love has gone into it.

but feck me - the amount of fuss this has caused - you'd think we're talking about nuclear warfare.

c'mon people - i for one am here for the love of art - this squabbling between you both is putting a hell of a lot of people off - no matter who's right or wrong.

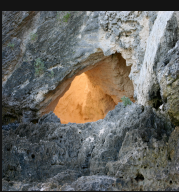

Please lets bury this.

peace

Silky - For the sake of this forum, I would ask you to be brave and to reconsider your position.

FPR came up with the idea for the awards. He worked his ass off to make this idea come to fruition.

People here are arguing for what they strongly believe is right. They are arguing for what they strongly believe is fair. Why else would they still be here at this time of the day? They are putting their views forward sincerely and reasonably, like adults.

This discussion is certainly a lively one. Of course, people sometimes say things in the heat of the moment which they wouldn't normally say.

However, please do not use the fact that other forum members feel strongly about this issue as an excuse for continuing to refuse FPR a stake in the ownership of the name of the awards. This is morally wrong. You must recognise that, and I am certain you are a better man than that.

Please do not dishonour yourself. The right decision can still be made.

This is absolute bullshit.

I'd like to add for everyone's note that FPR is more than likely embarrassed to have anyone fighting his corner. He's not the sort of person to ask people to back him up, he's strong enough to fight his own battles. But as he garners loyalty in people by being such a strong and friendly person, then people like me are glad to put their views, where he is involved, forward.

At the risk of fanning the fire, which I do not want to do again today, I would also like to point out that as far as I am concerned this is not a campaign against anyone. During the whole of the 'riot' last night, i received no PM's in direct relation to what we were talking about.

No-one is trying to push Silky around into making the forum anything other than it is. I love the forum just as it is.

I just don't agree with Silky's underhand tactics to take control of the forum awards concept away from FPR.

So don't anyone believe all this other persectuion bulls**t, as this is about one thing only, the awards. NOTHING ELSE.

this is a question i asked last night but never got an answer.

do you think that it is a sad indictment of what is supposed to be a free and open forum that members feel that they have to send messages of support privately?

i've noticed a number of people saying it recently and find it really sad.

if you think that there are dark forces at work then name names. i don't really keep up with forum politics so maybe that is why i am missing something.

if there are dark forces at work then name names. otherwise you just come across as paranoid.

silky, just give FPR complete control of the awards & the associated domain name & be done with it.

It was his idea, his hard work, all you did was register the name "to help him out" You keep avoiding the questions being asked by playing dumb (at least I think your playing dumb), just answer them, & sort out this problem.

I'm sure everyone appreciates yr the work you put into this forum, & the fact that you set it up in the first place, but as nu mentioned above, without the members of this forum, it's nothing

If you piss everyone off there'll be nothing left for you to

The fact that nu has gone speaks volumes...the sooner you open your eyes the better
